

UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE.

PHILIPP SCHLICHER, OF LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY.

IMPROVEMENT IN MEDICAL COMPOUNDS FOR THE HAIR.

Specification forming part of Letters Patent No. 119,052, dated September 19, 1871.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, PHILIPP SCHLICHER, of the city of Louisville, county of Jefferson, and State of Kentucky, have invented or discovered a certain Compound or Composition for the purpose of Causing Hair to Grow on the human head where it has fallen off prematurely or otherwise.

The nature of my invention or discovery consists in the following ingredients mixed together in their several proportions, which are as follows, viz.: Juice of the birch-tree, one ounce; rosmarine oil or rosemary, one-tenth of an ounce; mix these ingredients together by simply shaking them up until they are thoroughly mixed, when it is ready for use.

I claim as my invention—

The manufacture and use of a compound for the purpose of causing hair to grow on the human head, consisting of the ingredients in their several proportions as above described, and for the purpose herein set forth.

PHILIPP SCHLICHER.

Witnesses:

R. MASON,

E. F. HUYCK.