UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE.

HENRY H. ELBREG, OF GREENFIELD, INDIANA.

IMPROVEMENT IN DESKS.

Specification forming part of Letters Patent No. 176,847, dated May 2, 1876; application filed February 14, 1876.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, HENRY H. ELBREG, of Greenfield, in the county of Hancock and State of Indiana, have invented a new and Improved Writing-Desk, of which the following is a specification:

The invention consists in constructing and putting together the several parts of a writing-desk, as hereinafter more particularly described.

Similar letters of reference indicate corresponding parts.

A is a cabinet, having doors B opening on the front side, and containing revolving book-racks K and a fall-leaf writing-table, C, said table being pivoted at D, and at the middle of the end, or thereabout, connected, by bar E, with lever F, which swings out support G for the table automatically, when the table is let down for use, said lever being connected to the supports by bar H, and the lever and the support being pivoted to the case at I J.

In this example only one support is shown for the table, but in practice two will be used, one at each end.

The revolving racks may be fitted for books or papers, or both. They afford much more capacity than the ordinary case, and are more convenient for use. The space between them is fitted with a common rack, L.

Having thus described my invention, I claim as new and desire to secure by Letters Patent—

A writing-desk consisting of case A, having hinged doors, revolving cylindrical racks, stationary pigeon-holes, and a pivoted table, C, provided with bar E, lever F, hinged support G, and bar H, all constructed and arranged substantially as and for the purpose specified.
