(57) CLAIM

The ornamental design for a massaging apparatus for legs,
as shown and described.

DESCRIPTION

FIG. 1 is a front view of a massaging apparatus for legs
according to one embodiment of the present invention, shown with air bags in a deflated configuration.

FIG. 2 is a rear view of the massaging apparatus for legs of
FIG. 1, shown with air bags in a deflated configuration.

FIG. 3 is a top view of the massaging apparatus for legs of
FIG. 1, shown with air bags in a deflated configuration.

FIG. 4 is a bottom view of the massaging apparatus for legs
of FIG. 1, shown with air bags in a deflated configuration.

FIG. 5 is a left side view of the massaging apparatus for legs
of FIG. 1, shown with air bags in a deflated configuration.

FIG. 6 is a right side view of the massaging apparatus for legs of FIG. 1, shown with air bags in a deflated configuration.

FIG. 7 is a perspective view of the massaging apparatus for legs of FIG. 1, shown with air bags in a deflated configuration.

FIG. 8 is a front view of the massaging apparatus for legs of
FIG. 1, shown with air bags in an inflated configuration.

FIG. 9 is a rear view of the massaging apparatus for legs of
FIG. 1, shown with air bags in an inflated configuration.

FIG. 10 is a top view of the massaging apparatus for legs of
FIG. 1, shown with air bags in an inflated configuration.

FIG. 11 is a bottom view of the massaging apparatus for legs of FIG. 1, shown with air bags in an inflated configuration.

FIG. 12 is a left side view of the massaging apparatus for legs of FIG. 1, shown with air bags in an inflated configuration.

legs of FIG. 1, shown with air bags in an inflated configuration.

FIG. 14 is a perspective view of the massaging apparatus for legs of FIG. 1, shown with air bags in an inflated configuration; and,

FIG. 15 is a right side view of the massaging apparatus for legs of FIG. 1, shown with a movable table of the apparatus in an angled configuration.
