(57) CLAIM

An ornamental design for a parka, as shown and described.

DESCRIPTION

FIG. 1 is a front perspective view of the parka;
FIG. 2 is a front view of the parka;
FIG. 3 is a rear view of the parka;
FIG. 4 is a side view of the parka;
FIG. 5 is a top view of the parka;
FIG. 6 is a front perspective view of the parka of FIGS. 1–5
with the hood unzipped;
FIG. 7 is a rear perspective view of the parka of FIGS. 1–5 with the hood unzipped; and,
FIG. 8 is a front view of the parka of FIGS. 1–5 with the front partially unzipped.

Several figures show a pattern on a portion of the parka hood,
which illustrates a surface treatment of a fur-like material.
This surface treatment does not obscure or override the underlying design, and the underlying configuration without the surface treatment is considered part of the disclosed invention.

FIG. 8 shows an ornamental stitching pattern covering the entirety of the inside surface of the jacket, which does not form a part of the invention as currently claimed. Other features shown in broken lines format in the drawings also form no part of the currently claimed invention.
