1.5 : Back

Shoe tree especially for water sports and surfer's shoes, whereby the shoe tree is only inserted in the shaft diameter of the back part of the shoe supporting the complete shaft height; hereby the shaft diameter is stretched and by the shoe tree's design the circulation of the air is improved and the drying time is speeded-up; further such a shoe tree serves as a shoe rack allowing to position the shoes upside-down on a radiator or next to any other heating element securing an optimal air circulation for the shoe drying.
